Involvement

What are the benefits of joining a Student Organization?
Participation in a student organization encourages you to interact and develop leadership and networking skills. Membership will benefit you both personally and professionally.

Can I add participation in a Student Organization to my resume?
Yes! Student organizations should be included on your resume, since this experience shows your teamwork and leadership skills.

Is there a cost?
Most student organizations do not charge a participation fee unless it is a national honors society. There may be charges for certain special events or field trips.

Which Student Organization is best for me?
You should select a student organization based on your general interests, academic major, and personal/professional development.

How much time is involved?
Student organizations usually meet once or twice a month during free periods and or late afternoons.

How do I join an Organization?
Participation in student organizations varies slightly by the nature of the organization. Some organizations require a minimum GPA, but most will admit all students who are interested in participating. Organization requirements are found in this booklet.
